Therapy Dogs at Work — Angels in Fur

What does a Therapy Dog do?

Therapy Dogs have a wide variety of roles. They can work with all ages from infants to elderly and in a wide variety of environments. Some are Volunteer Social/Therapy Teams where a trained handler and his or her trained dog visit facilities or work alongside therapists or teachers. Some Therapy Dogs are Facility Dogs with more advanced training and work with their trained handlers on a daily basis within a medical or educational facility.

Therapy Dogs are able to touch a place within us when we are in need that other humans cannot reach. They bring comfort, healing, smiles, decrease stress, lower blood pressure, increase self-esteem, and facilitate interactions—among other benefits. Therapy Dogs can change the entire dynamic of a facility with their presence.
